LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

"FOR the fraction of a second, he glared at her," I told Dicky, with a vivid mirthful remembrance of the dignified heart specialist's face when my mother-in-law told him what she thought of his advice. "Then his lips began to twitch, and the next instant he was smiling indulgently at her.

"'Why not compromise?' he asked her. 'You have children and grandchildren who love you dearly, haven't you?'

A Wry Smile

"'At least they say they do,' she told him with a wry little smile, and he threw back his head and laughed heartily.

"'I don't think you ought to doubt them,' he told her next, 'and you ought to know that you would cause them infinite anguish if you should go out of their lives.

"'I can see,' he went on, 'that you are the type of woman who makes duty her watchword. Don't you think you ought to consider their feelings and do just a little bit of trusting?'"

"Clever approach, that!" my husband commented. "The old boy's arrow pierced the heel of Achilles, I'll bet."

"I would lose if I took that wager," I said, smiling. "You know your mother's watchword is 'Duty,' and you could see her resistance crumbling into bits.

Will Follow Orders

"'I know,' she said, at last, gloomily, 'and I'm a wicked old woman not to bear this particular cross cheerfully. All right!' she finished suddenly. 'Give me your orders, and I'll follow them.'

"I think if she had been almost anyone else," I went on, "the specialist would have patted her shoulder approvingly. But I saw him give a canny glance at her, and his answering words were unaccompanied by gestures."

"Showing he knows his onions, creamed, or fried," Dicky said. "But what did he tell Mother she could do—or, rather, could not do?"

"She can walk short distances as long as she does not get fatigued or out of breath. She can do light housework, with the same limitations. She must not lift heavy things, must not walk fast or hurry about any work, must bend over as little as possible, and must climb stairs only once or twice a day.

Must Not Worry

"But above all," I finished, "she must not get excited, and must not worry."

"She's had a fine dose of both," he commented. "She was all steamed up about bringing that secret code in to Dad, and when she saw me in this wheel chair, it was a great shock to her. Also," he went on ruefully, "I've talked the arm off her while you've been gone."

I expected his next sentence to be the caustic demand. "What kept you so long?" But to my surprise he did not utter it, instead went on to reproach himself further.

"I should have thought, and made her lie down," he said. "But she never stopped asking questions about my life at camp."

"You haven't a thing to regret," I told him firmly. "You're right about her excitement over bringing in the code, and her shock at seeing you in a wheel chair. Both of those things, no doubt, were the cause of this upset. But your talking to her was like soothing medicine. It probably did her a great deal of good; calmed her down, so that she did not have a severe heart attack, as she otherwise easily might have done. And it certainly did her no harm. So stop reproaching yourself."

"Come here!" my husband said suddenly, and when I had come to the side of his wheel chair, his arms went around me, and he kissed me tenderly.

"Do you know, you're a pretty swell egg," he said, and I glowed at the slangy praise.

But I could not remain by his side, and I drew myself away with a murmured: "So sorry, darling, but I must get hold of Mary right away."

YOUR HEALTH

By HERMAN BUNDENSEN, M.D.

Bed Rest

Nearly every family circle includes some beloved oldster whose gentle wisdom and kindliness add joy to the life of the home, but whose health offers special problems.

If one of these elderly persons falls ill, it is natural for the family to believe that prolonged rest in bed is necessary. This is far from true. Indeed, modern medical men are of the opinion that for most elderly patients the shorter the stay in bed, the better.

According to Dr. John F. Norman of Minnesota, when elderly people are confined to bed, they soon lack the will to make the effort to get up and around. They become hopeless in their outlook and in time even mentally backward. Without some incentive to get back to work or to their homes, these patients fail badly.

The custom of keeping patients in bed for a long period of time is more or less of a tradition. With the improvement in surgery and medical care, it would appear that such prolonged bed rest is unnecessary, may even be harmful.

Once an older patient is up and around, he will, as a rule, feel that there is hope that he is going to get well and he will co-operate better with the physician. Following operations in elderly people, there is a danger of complications affecting the heart, blood vessels and lungs. The danger is far greater for overweight patients than for thin ones.

Blood Clots

In elderly patients after days or weeks of bed rest, blood clots are likely to form in the veins, particularly in the back of the leg or foot. Pneumonia may develop due to a collection of fluid in the lungs, favored by prolonged inactivity and bed rest. Long-continued bed rest may also be harmful in elderly people with heart disease since it not only may lead to congestion in the lungs but also to weakening of the heart muscle.

Of course, no set of rules can be put down for all elderly persons. However, in general, it would appear that prolonged bed rest adds to the risk in illnesses of the aged who already are handicapped and many would do better if they are out of bed early.

Problems regarding care of the old are more important now than ever before because the number of old people is constantly increasing. Due to the rapid strides made in the prevention of disease and death in younger age groups, more people are living to a ripe old age.

Today, in the United States there are over nine million persons of 65 years or more, an increase of 36.5 per cent during the last ten years, a period during which the total population increased only 7.2 per cent.

Thus, with more elderly people whose welfare must be considered, medicine is striving to find better ways of looking after them.

Boyle Discovers Awad—Another "Character"

By HAL BOYLE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CAIRO—Awad Hassan Aly has only one really bad habit. He likes to wash his feet in the kitchen sink.

That kitchen is workshop and temple for Awad, who looks like a cross between "Little Orphan Annie" and the end man in a minstrel show. He is known variously as "Awad the Great," "Awad the First" and "The Tarboosh Kid."

Hal Boyle

He is a 15-year-old orphaned Sudanese boy, lean and gangling with feet like tennis racquets and dangling hands as big as baseball gloves. He also has a grin as wide as a Kansas sunflower and a sweet and simple soul shining as his own white teeth.

It is something of an open question whether "Awad the First" was adopted by a group of Associated Press correspondents here or he adopted them. In any case his realm for two years has been their apartment and his reign is now irrevocably established. He has more titles than an Indian prince—chief cook, bottlewasher, custodian of the broom, mascot, and on occasions, office banker.

Each morning after brewing tea Awad presents his boss, Max Boyd, a budget estimate of daily expenses and the first item invariably begins "food for Awad—six piastres."

Learns Way Early

Awad had to learn early thus to fend first for himself. He was born in a village on the Assam—Sudan frontier. When he was one year old his parents called in a local barber and he notched the baby's face to leave ever afterward the distinct scars worn by these villagers.

His father died before Awad's memory begins and his mother died when he was 10. He came to Cairo and helped his brother cook for an Egyptian family until he took up "kitchen journalism."

When you first meet Awad you have an irresistable urge to grab up a plate and catch his hands before they drop off his loose hanging arms and fall to the floor, later you learn those ungainly hands are deft enough at cooking up an appetizing breakfast although he has one weakness as a chef. Since he is a faithful Moslem, and therefore forbidden pork, he dislikes cooking bacon.

"It makes me dizzy," he says—so he usually serves it half raw. Awad will go down in medical history as one of the most consistent benefactors of trichinosis—the disease, not its victims. His own favorite dishes are beans and potatoes and dried date.

Two-Book Man

There have been only two books in his life—the Arabic Phrasebook and the Holy Koran, bible of his faith. Five times a day Awad halts his tasks, kneels on a clean piece of cardboard spread on the kitchen floor, turns his face toward Mecca and prays to his god with the fervor of his guileless servant soul. At night he sleeps on that same floor.

Awad earns four Egyptian pounds a month besides his keep and turns most of it over to his two married brothers. But he has other mysterious sources of revenue such as the sale of waste paper. He also was a war profiteer and earned substantial amounts during the period of the desert battles by selling bottles left by visiting newspapermen after beer parties thrown during visits back from the front.

Most of this money is sunk by Awad in strange investments such as an Arab "chain letter" contribution system under which 15 Arab servants chip in a half pound monthly. Each month one servant collects the full amount and binges it.

Not Very Sharp

Awad usually looks like he had just crawled out of a catacomb. But he has under lock and key one resplendent uniform for trips to western and gangster movies and visits to his relatives. It consists of a scarlet tarboosh hat, a green sidari jacket and a white and purple striped gallabya robe that would do justice to Pharaoh. There are bugles blowing in Awad's heart whenever he wears it.

He often lends money to hard pressed native news messengers.

Since the Koran forbids him to collect interest he gets return on his investment by compelling debtors to clean the apartment for him. And in this he is as hard a taskmaster as old Scrooge himself.

Like many Egyptians Awad worships power and the topdog. Once when asked what he did with 10 piastres—40 cents—"baksheeshs" or tip money he replied: "I saw the king, he was passing by and because I am little fellow I couldn't see over heads of the crowd. So I paid 10 piastres and rented a ladder and saw our king drive by."

His racket now is to collect 20 piastres "baksheesh" so he can hire two ladders "and see the queen too."

Five Champion Farmers Picked

Five States Represented in Choices for Exclusive Agricultural Group.

Special to The Star

AKRON, O., March 18—The Champion Farmers Association of America—the world's most exclusive agricultural organization—today admitted to membership five outstanding farm leaders from as many states.

The new members, selected for important contributions to specific branches of agriculture, are William Gehring of Rensselaer, Ind.; William F. Renk of Sun Prairie, Wis.; J. D. McGee of Morgan, Ga.; Thomas J. Pearsall of Rocky Mount, N. C.; and William Richards of Forestdale, Mass. Awards were announced by L. R. Jackson, executive vice president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., which cooperated in the founding of the association in 1937.

131 Members Now

One hundred thirty-one farmers scattered from coast to coast, representing every type of agriculture, are now active in the association.

Nominated by farm leaders and elected by the C.F.A.'s membership committee of agricultural authorities, the five new members will take part in an educational program in behalf of better farming, carried out through periodic national conferences at which members exchange new ideas and discuss improved practices. After the meetings they make this information available to other agriculturalists in their home areas.

The achievements which brought the five men recognition by the association follow:

Mr. Gehring—Helping greatly to bring the rich muck lands of northern Indiana into heavy production through the application of proper fertilizer, irrigation, crop diversification and highly mechanized farming.

Mr. Renk—Establishing with his three sons an outstanding family farm enterprise which last year from 850 acres produced more than 1,000,000 pounds of beef, pork and lamb on the hoof, 25,000 bushels of hybrid seed corn, 10,000 bushels of Victoria oats and a carload of sheared wool.

Mr. McGee—Introducing a versatile, well-balanced system of farming, centered on peanuts as the chief crop, in southern Georgia.

Mr. Pearsall—Pioneering in tenant-landlord relationships as manager of the 22,000-acre Braswell Farms in eastern North Carolina, by providing modern conveniences and equipment for 1,100 men, women and children on the plantation, and promoting education.

Mr. Richards — Inaugurating large-scale truck farming in the heart of the Cape Cod cranberry country with spectacular success, largely as the result of utilization of fertilizer and green manure crops, plant breeding, irrigation and advanced cropping methods.

FIRST SANDWICH MAN

By The Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO—During a recent bank workers strike in Rio de Janeiro, a new sight—the sandwich man — appeared on the streets as a picket. This tactic, a common sight in more industrialized countries, caused much comment as crowds watched strikers walking around with sandwich-type signs. One columnist devoted a column in the afternoon paper O Globo, to the innovation.

What's New at Metropolitan?

THERE IS MUCH good news for policyholders in the 1945 record of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Payments to policyholders and their beneficiaries reached a new all-time high of $623,000,000. Mortality among policyholders, excluding war deaths, was the lowest on record. The yield on the Company's investments followed the general trend and declined somewhat. The Company had asset gains which made it possible to revise policy and annuity reserves so as to reflect lower interest earnings. Scales of dividends to policyholders were maintained, and in some cases slightly increased.

Unassigned surplus funds at the year end amounted to $448,600,000. In addition the Company had special surplus funds of $109,400,000, of which $95,100,000 represented a special reserve for possible loss or fluctuation in the value of investments and $14,300,000 a Group Insurance reserve for epidemics, etc. These funds represent an extra cushion of safety for policyholders.

In its report to policyholders for 1945, Metropolitan provides answers to many of the questions a policyholder would be likely to ask if he could make a personal visit to the Company. Among questions answered, for example, are . . .

Were there many extra claim payments last year due to the war?

Would longer life for policyholders reduce the cost of Life Insurance?

In what types of investments did the Company put its money?

What does the Company advise about National Service Life Insurance?

In addition to answering these and many other questions, the report gives a financial summary of the Company's operations during 1945. Whether or not you are a policyholder, you will find this report interesting and informative. To get a copy, just write and ask for the Company's annual report entitled, "What's New At Metropolitan?"

Take Another Look

...ce of fact I was glad ...

Dr. Renner raised this subject because it impelled Mrs. Mack and me to re-examine the capital with an expert guide to make a fresh assay of the damage sustained in the siege towards the close of the war. Of course, Vienna was terribly hurt by bombing and gunfire, but a city is like the human body—it can endure grievous injuries and recover without showing many scars.

Now I don't want to inject any over optimistic language into this dispatch. Vienna is heavily damaged, but when we have emphasized that point it can be added that relatively speaking she came through her ordeal pretty well.

You get encouragement for that idea if you make your way around the Ringstrasse, famous as a promenade in days of peace. Along that boulevard stand many of Vienna's noted buildings and it's surprising what a large number have survived the bombardment, in whole or in part. A good deal of repair work already is under way, too, so that you feel the pulse of life, whereas in cities like Berlin, where there has been virtually total destruction, you don't need to be told that they are dead.

Much To Be Done

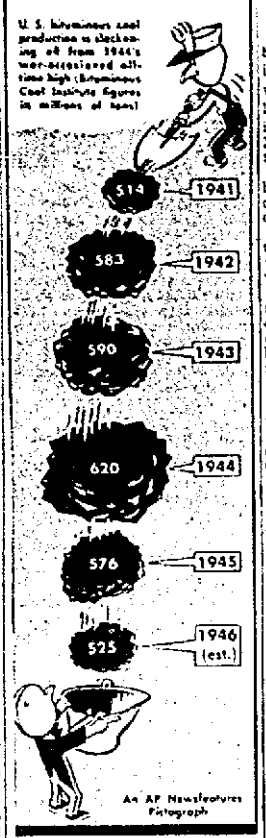
Vienna's visions of tourists are by no means a mirage, but she has many problems to solve besides the lack of bricks and mortar before those visions can come fully true. Her most pressing difficulty—and this is true of most of the country—is the grave scarcity of food. Many people in Austria are hungry. In some sections they are trying to subsist on as little as 700 calories a day, and that's far below the level that will support health.

This is the second time in a quarter century that Austria has learned the hard way what war means to countries which aren't self-sufficient.

Grim days are ahead between now and the new harvest.

Still, when Austria has surmounted that danger there's no reason why—perhaps in a small way at first—Dr. Renner's tourist dream should not come true. Austria can achieve this dream if she isn't caught in the whirlpool of international politics growing out of realignment of the balance of power in Europe. Austria is in the center of that upheaval and there can be no doubt that her independence of action is involved in the outcome.

BITUMINOUS COAL OUTPUT



Big Time Operators Control Clever German Black Market

By The Associated Press

HERFORD, March 18 — The black market is so cleverly organized in Germany now that a gang was able to steal an entire trainload of coal in the Ruhr, transport it 200 miles to Aurich near the North Sea and swap it for potatoes.

This flagrant case was disclosed by a British Military Government officer whose position forbids his quotation by name.

The officer said the remarkable theft of hundreds of tons of coal was only one example of the "brains" behind the black market.

"Obviously these gangs are reaching into high railroad circles," he said. "They must have connections with Germans who have been retained to run the rails."

Set Up Squads

Illicit trading has reached such proportions that British occupation authorities have set up special teams of police, working with Germans, in concentrated efforts to trap the ringleaders.

Fantastic stories circulate throughout the zone of sharp dealings, some pure rumor and others based on some fact.

Some gangs have been caught on the highways through systematic road checks. Since these checks have been intensified, though, the marketeers have taken to the back roads where it is almost impossible to track them down.

This senior officer told a reporter that the police effort must be concentrated on the big operators.

"Frankly, right now we don't think the German could live without the black market," he said. "I mean the little operators where a farmer gets permission from the burgomaster to slaughter more pigs than he should. That starts the train of events. A piece of pork is traded for some clothing. The clothing goes to someone else for cigarets. The cigarets brings whisky, perhaps. The whisky is traded to still another person for perhaps a piece of pork. It depends what a person needs.

Admit It's Tough

"These little transactions never can be stamped out. What we are trying to do is to keep the thing from getting out of hand."

Stiff treatment for the big operator must be the solution, the officer thinks. Some large manipulator must have been behind the black market in Brunswick recently, judging by the flow of illicit goods. So the British troops threw a cordon around one sector and systematically searched every place. They rounded up several thousand persons.

TRADITIONAL OBERVANCE HELD BY DE MOLAY GROUP

MISSING MILWAUKEE GIRL FOUND UNHURT

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, March 18 — The week-long search for 16-year-old Suzanne Froedtert ended today when police officers announced the Milwaukee school girl had been found in a flat in suburban Highland Park.

Suzanne, whose father, Kurtis R. Froedtert, heads the Froedtert Grain and Malt Co. in Milwaukee, had been missing from a school in Madison, Wis., since last Monday. Announcement of a country-wide search for her was made over a national radio hook-up last night.

Sgt. Noel Larsen of the Highland Park police said the girl told officers she came here voluntarily and had been working in a candy factory since Wednesday.

According to Larsen, Suzanne was found on the information of a man who heard the broadcast and told officers the girl's description fitted that of a young woman who had moved into a nearby flat a few days earlier.

Suzanne left the school last Monday because authorities there had told her they were going to report an infraction of school rules to her parents, now vacationing in Miami, Florida. It was first believed she was on her way to join them, but when she did not appear a search was started and the family offered a "substantial reward."

Larsen said the girl carried a social security card bearing the name of "Sue Muer."

Last night Froedtert asked the police and the federal bureau of investigation to "take active charge" of an investigation because of the possibility of kidnaping or other foul play.

QUIT ROMAN CHURCH

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, March 18 — After three and a half centuries of affiliation with Roman Catholicism, the Uniat churches of the Western Ukraine have severed connections with the Vatican and will rejoin the Russian orthodox church. A letter sent to Generalissimo Stalin and signed by church officials said that 216 delegates to a church assembly at Lwow decided "to return to the bosom of our grandfather, the Holy Russian orthodox church."

THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN church was the scene of the wedding of the Miss Eleanor Marriott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Mariott of 121 John street, and Raymond J. Mayfield, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Mayfield of 656 Windsor street, Sunday afternoon.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. Her bridal gown of white faille silk was made with a basque, leg o'mutton sleeves and the skirt extended into a long train. Cutout work outlined the sweetheart neckline and was repeated in the edging of the short peplum of her basque. A tiara of pearlized orange blossoms held her fingertip veil of bridal illusion and her bouquet of white roses was centered with a gardenia. Her jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

Mrs. Harold Thomas, sister of the bridegroom was the matron of honor and the bride's only attendant. Her gown of white georgette was fashioned with a fitted bodice, made with a sweetheart neckline, and full skirt. Her headdress of ribbon was in the bride's colors of lilac and green and she carried a bouquet of blue iris.

The bridegroom's brother, Richard Mayfield served as his best man and ushers were Robert Mayfield of Crestline, also a brother of the bridegroom, and Harold Thomas.

For the double ring ceremony, read at 2:30 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. Howard L. Olewiler, the altar was banked with greenery centered with a large basket filled with white gladioli. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Harry T. Williams, organist, and Mrs. Robert Mayfield of Crestline, sang. The organ music included "Wedding Bells," Truette, "The Nightingale and the Rose," Saint-Saens, "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life," Herbert, "Indian Love Call," Friml, "Liebestraum," Liszt and the traditional wedding marches. Mrs. Mayfield sang "Always," Berlin, and "I Love You Truly," Bond and during the ceremony Mrs. Williams played "Because," D'Hardelot and "Estrellita," Ponce.

Following the ceremony there was a reception in the church parlors. The bride's mother was costumed in a pink and black print with which she combined a flower hat, black accessories and a corsage of pink camellias. Mrs. Mayfield's gown was in a powder blue shade with which she wore a hat in a fuchsia shade, black accessories and a gardenia corsage.

Crenshaw pointed out that the movement is not prohibition but a complete change of personality and he outlined the 12 steps in the development of the personality change. He emphasized the similarity of the terms used in the medical and religious developments, the first encouraging interests in hobbies, people, and creative activities, and religion following the Biblical teaching "love your fellowman." Mrs. Clovis Altmaier introduced Rev. Crenshaw.

Mrs. E. C. Strauss was welcomed as a new member.

6-WEEK EXTENSION OF DRAFT SOUGHT

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 18—The idea of a six-week compromise extension caught the fancy of some senators today as pressure grew for keeping the draft alive.

Selective Service now is due to expire May 15. The six-week period would carry it to July 1.

With the senate military committee set for a full dress review of the subject tomorrow, there were these devolpments.

1. Secretary of State Byrnes added his pleas to those of President Truman and top Army officers when he told a New York audience Saturday night that this country needs military strength to support the principles of the United Nations.

2. Members of the house military committee disclosed secret testimony of war department officials that the army might fall to only 570,000 men by July 1, 1947, if it has to rely solely on voluntary enlistments after May 15.

3. Twenty-six house members joined in sponsoring a resolution calling for a special study of the draft question by a senate-house committee.

Some members of the senate military committee mentioned the six-week extension, saying privately they thought it would give the Army enough men, taken with volunteers, to meet its interim needs.

The July 1 date would permit the induction of youths presently deferred to finish the current school term and would provide time for congress to transfer job right provisions of the Selective Service act to some other government agency.

One Crisis After Another

THE PRESIDENT of the United States, now approaching the first anniversary of his duty of dealing with one crisis after another, ducked a chance to pity himself in his latest press conference and said, instead, he didn't think the current international crisis is as serious as some of his countrymen seem to believe it is.

Coming from Mr. Truman at this time such a remark is worth taking apart to see what makes it tick. This is not the first time that Mr. Truman has soft-pedaled the crisis fixation that seems to have the United States in its grip. There are signs that he makes a distinction in his thinking between a problem and a crisis—and if he continues to do this and to get the idea into general circulation a tremendous thing would have been accomplished.

The current problem in international relations, which is to find terms for bringing governments and their peoples together for their common security, may be a genuine crisis, but probably it isn't. Probably it is only a routine problem that could have been anticipated by anyone aware of the inevitable difficulties of reaching workable agreements after the end of the war. The apparent reason why the problem appears to be a crisis to so many of us is our failure to be prepared to take it in our stride.

There has grown up among us a curious notion that everything which goes contrary to our fondest hopes or turns out less than perfect is somehow by that token a crisis and a crossroads. This questionable manner of looking at problems has been encouraged by the government habit of viewing all routine problems as major problems, all major problems as emergencies and all emergencies as crises. The effect has been to depreciate the value of the terms.

The United States has had, to be sure, more than one crisis recently. It had a bona fide crisis when a combination of unscrupulous politics and fumbling economics destroyed public confidence in the early part of the last decade. There was a genuine crisis when this country was forced to fight two major wars at extreme range simultaneously. But in the sense that a crisis is a climax—an instant of decision when everything hangs in the balance—most of the other events that people have called crises have been at worst no more than problems.

In its war-won position as the nation holding the balance of power, the United States is destined to have an endless succession of problems. As Mr. Truman has been learning, they come on such a frequent schedule that it is hard to keep track of them. Because he has been forced to develop a philosophy for dealing with them to keep a semblance of mental balance, he shows promise of helping all of us to buckle down a little more gracefully to our responsibilities.

There are many problems. They concern things at home and abroad. They tempt all of us, and particularly those with some special interest, to start yelling that the dam has broken and everybody should run for the hills. But it is obvious that running for the hills should be saved for the real thing. In the meantime, Mr. Truman has a better idea, which is to forego the bad habit of indulging our worst fears on a daily schedule.

Trojan Horse in Sheep's Clothing

STRAIGHT-FACED statements about the inalienable right of foremen to belong to labor unions would be funny if they did not conceal one of the most arrogant plots ever made against industrial discipline.

Foremen do have a right to belong to labor unions, if they choose. But at the same time their employer has a right to decide whether they shall continue to be foremen.

In some cases it might be feasible for a foreman to try to carry out the plans of management and at the same time to be associated with a labor union. In other cases, it couldn't be done.

When that was the case, would a foreman retain his right not to belong to a labor union? That is where the plot thickens. It started 13 years ago with an obscure passage of the national industrial recovery act which later became widely known as Section 7a. It guaranteed that "employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing."

That guarantee became the foundation of the national labor relations act and the curious perversion of labor's rights that caused many employes to lose the right not to join a labor union if they don't want to join because under the New Deal they gained the right to join one if they did want to join.

Once unions with an ax to grind can establish that foremen have a right to join if they want to, the foremen won't be long in discovering that they lost the right not to join if they don't want to—and management's last means of being management will have been sacrificed to the monstrous legalism that gives rights by taking them away.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

Strike Settlement Brings Only Muted Cheers.

WASHINGTON, March 18—The volume of national cheering was suspiciously limited at the breaking of the key strikes in motors and electrics. Labor Secretary Schwellenbach emitted one long hurrah, but the initial statements from both sides were definitely vague and completely unenthusiastic, while the nation's cheering section as a whole seemed more concerned about asking who won and what it all meant.

No one won.

The deeper my inquiries led me to the inside of the matter, the clearer it became that the auto strike deadlock was not a matter of difference in wages, or "manpower", or any other advertised details of the conflict—but involved one single question.

That question was whether the CIO was to be a supra-business directorate in the same way it has sought to become a supra-government, in plainer language: was CIO to be the boss and run the business, as it has attempted to be boss of government and run it.

CIO Loses Ground

Clearly CIO lost ground on that proposition. It's initial plan was to open the company books, determine company profits by this and future wage demands and make the concern subservient to union-economics by preventing the company from getting any price increase to meet these demands. These pressure moves appear to have been broken all along the line. The settlement mentions no book inspection and the initial statements avoided also the subject of wages and profits. Indeed, the government announced just before the break that any future auto price increases would be made retroactive and could be collected from the consumer after the sale — which suggests there may be price increases despite the union announcement to the contrary.

The CIO spell of domination has therefore been broken—but for how long? Motors got a two year contract, but Schwellenbach suggested it provided reopening of wage considerations in one year. The steel settlement was for one year. The pattern of all other current labor agreements is similarly one year, based also on the same wage increase. They plainly allow, therefore, for reopening the general strike campaign at this time.

Is this basic settlement then but a one year truce in the CIO campaign to create a supra business dictatorship? Will all the familiar pressures of CIO upon business and government be renewed 12 months hence in the same revolutionary form, or even stronger form?

These are the questions which the settlement left lurking in the minds of thinking people and explains why the nation's cheering was considerably short of enthusiastic.

No Permanent Promise

The agreements failed to achieve a permanent promise of continued production—in short a solution. But it certainly represents the first important progress toward that goal in many a past year. For one thing management did not cave in timidly in the face of pressures to absorb it, but broke them. General Motors stood its ground and thus pointed the way toward a new and democratic technique for management which has been on the run for a long time. Also it beat the strategic union plan to isolate it from its competitors. Ford and Chrysler could not take advantage of GM's troubles because they could not get basic materials for production. Futhermore, the union scheme to bring in Kaiser as a new motors manufacturer, and have him go to the White House and announce his acceptance of the union proposals and become champion for CIO, did not break the company position. The orders of government which would have put the company under the union thumb likewise were resisted.

These developments mark progress in the reconversion of the nation to genuine democratic peacetime ways of freedom from domination.

What is needed next is the development of an era of good feeling in labor relations in which unions will become unions again, and not aspirants for dictatorship of business and civil affairs. Then we will be truly reconverted to democracy.

A NEW USE FOR OLD CONGRESSMEN?

Members of the Southern Dairy Goat Owners and Breeders association have protested Navy proposals to put 300 goats aboard ships participating in forthcoming atomic bomb tests. "Good goats are scarcer than congressmen," they say. "Why not use the latter?"

This a revolutionary suggestion, to be sure, but one which is meeting with widespread approval in non-congressional circles.

Goat milk may not hold a solution to the nation's problems. But then obviously neither does congress.

Weighing the respective merits of goats and congressmen, one must conclude that the former, while in worse odor, are undeniably in better repute.

So much of his program having failed of enactment, President Truman is reported in favor of using certain congressmen in the Bikini Atoll experiments. To see, I mean, if even atomic energy can move them.

There's one thing about it: While a great many citizens look with regret on plans to include goats, dogs, cats and chickens on the test fleet, not even the Society for The Prevention of Cruelty To Animals would complain about using lame ducks.

Protestants Open Moral Film Drive

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Protestant Motion Picture Council has developed a plan to give organized support to movies of good moral quality.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald and sponsor of the council, explained that in addition to appraising pictures as in the past, members of various Protestant churches would be asked to organize active box office support for better films.

"This is the constructive American answer to un-American political censorship," Dr. Poling said. He added that the council would form a committee to work with the producing companies in suggesting suitable films and assuring the producers of the council's backing for such films.

Bomb Protection for Civilians

By Jack Stinnett

WASHINGTON—"An analysis of the nature of casualties encountered in the bombing of large centers of population has changed our thinking concerning the best methods for protecting civilians from injury and death in air raids.

"Preliminary reports from Hiroshima and Nagasaki indicate that the number and type of injuries sustained in an atomic bomb attack do not differ significantly from those inflicted upon the Germans in the great fire raids. Indeed, considering the type of protection offered by the steel and stone buildings in Europe as contrasted with the traditional frame construction in Japan, the raids on such cities as Hamburg, Cologne and Essen appear to have been more destructive than the atom bomb attacks on Japan."

This conclusion is an excerpt from an article, "Civilian Health in the Air War," published in Modern Medicine. Although the official Army report on the medical effects of bombing in Germany isn't yet available, the medical journal article was written by the editor-in-chief of that official report: Maj. Cortez F. Enloe Jr., chief of the medical sciences branch, morale division, U. S. Strategic Bombing survey.

Scientific Report

Being a purely scientific report, the article gives only the cold statistics of death, injuries and disease, but behind them is the world's greatest story of human misery—the story of destruction of human life and health by the great bombing raids over Europe.

"It may safely be concluded," write Major Enloe, "that one-half million enemy civilians were killed by Allied bombs in Europe. . . . A careful check of figures indicates that approximately 422,000 deaths resulted from air raids. Investigation in 24 German cities indicates that 77,500 bodies were completely destroyed or still lie buried in the rubble and are yet to be recorded."

Major Enloe says the use of atomic bombs doesn't alter the significance of the survey's findings except "to make an awareness of the possibilities more imperative." He says that apparently the safest place to locate essential civilian workers is around the edges of cities so that transportation breaks won't affect their work, yet far from strategic targets.

There are reports of the many causes of death and injury; of burns and burial in debris; of carbon monoxide poisoning; of dust inhalation; of drowning in air raid shelters, scalding and chemical burns; and of fright and exhaustion.

Mechanical injuries, it was found, were the most frequent causes of death — that is, direct hits by bombs or fragments, burial in rubble, and fire. It also was found that incendiary raids caused more dead than high explosive demolition bombs. This fact is interesting.

"Since published reports," says Major Enloe, "that the explosion from nuclear fission (atomic bombs) is mainly incendiary in nature, the German experience suggests that more people may be killed than injured in any future total war."

Words of Wisdom

Meditation is the nurse of thought, and thought the food for meditation.—C. Simons.

Meditation is that exercise of the mind by which it recalls a known truth, as some kind of creatures do their food, to be ruminated upon till all the valuable parts be extracted. — Bp. George Horne.

It is easier to go six miles to hear a sermon, than to spend one quarter of an hour in meditating upon it when I come home.—Philip Henry.

It is not he that reads most, but he that meditates most on divine truth, that will prove the choicest, wisest, strongest Christian.—Bp. Joseph Hall.

Thought must be made better, and human life more fruitful, for the divine energy to move it onward and upward.—Mary Baker Eddy.

GO EASY, Japan, will ya? You're killing us with that contortionist act and that changing-a-warrior-into-a-turtle-dove number.

Security Without Effort

By Truman Twill

The deluxe version of the bathrobe, a full length all-purpose, all-weather garment called the house-coat, has become the basic unit of female wearing apparel—and it was about time.

These columns lately seem to be harping on the subject of wearing apparel for women. A few days ago it was leg makeup and hosiery. Before that it was women's hats.

But the house-coat is more than another detail of female foibles. It is a national institution with great things ahead of it. It saves time, money and nervous energy. Sooner or later something had to happen. Everything is under control now.

This is said with the conviction of one who has made first-hand observations. Nine out of ten women who dodge out to the front steps to gather in the milk, the morning paper and the pup in the early morning do it in house-coats. What the 10th one wears may be almost anything or almost nothing; it doesn't matter.

Inquiry reveals this further fact: that most of the women who wear house-coats in the early morning still have them on by the middle of the morning. Sometimes they keep them on all day and never get dressed at all, which is the singular advantage of the house-coat.

It conceals all. It is as handy as an Arabian sheet. The housecoat offers perfect security with no effort. The thing has the beautiful simplicity of a wrap-around, with none of the bad lines, especially when it is made of quilted material.

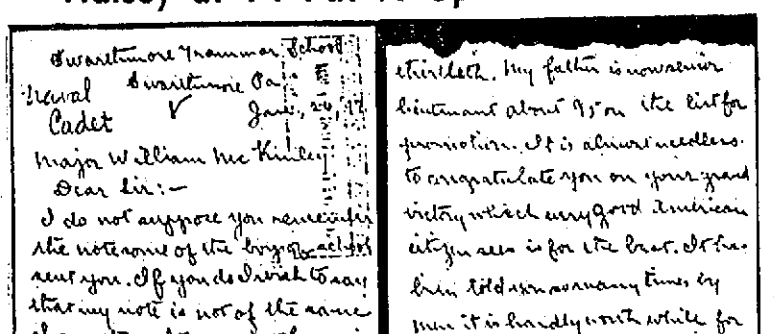
It shuts out drafts and is not translucent. It is not the house-coat's function to be translucent. That is what the negligee is for. The house-coat is for occasions when a lady puts comfort ahead of adventure.

It is for answering the door during a bout with the typewriter or the mop. It is for warmth and comfort during the ambulatory stage of convalescence. It is for every occasion where a sleeping garment would give the public the wrong idea—but the sleeping garment is all there all right, all right, all right.

Because it provides a common denominator to make all women look alike when they don't care what they look like, always a touchy situation, the house-coat ranks close to central heating, running water and canned goods in the list of really worthwhile conveniences developed in our era.

It will be a happy day when they make something equally useful for men—something long enough to touch the floor and quilted to hide the figure that ain't there any more.

Halsey at 14 Put It Up To President



Swarthmore Grammar School
Swarthmore Pa.
Jan. 20, 19[illegible]

Major William McKinley
Dear Sir:—

I do not suppose you remember the notorious boy who called on you. If you do I wish to say that my note is not of the same character. It may not be amiss to you as this was although I am [illegible] thirteenth. My father is now senior lieutenant about 95 on the list for promotion. It is almost needless to congratulate you on your grand victory which every good American citizen was for the best. I have been told several times by men it is hardly worth while for me to try to enlist. Yours respectfully
Swarthmore Grammar School, Halsey
Swarthmore Pa.

THE BOY who wrote this letter to McKinley became Admiral William F. Halsey.

By The Associated Press

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — It was a forthright, somewhat wistful letter ending with a solemn "yours respectively" that earned its youthful author an appointment to the Naval Academy by President William McKinley.

The appointee was Admiral William F. Halsey.

Halsey was 14, dreaming of becoming a midshipman, and a "border" as he spelled it—at the Swarthmore grammar school in Pennsylvania when he composed his letter to "Major" McKinley as the President was known before he took office.

He wrote he hoped for an appointment through the President because he did "not know any congressman and the appointment for the district where I live, which is Elizabeth, N. J., is at present filled."

Informing McKinley that his father was a naval officer, the boy observed, "as you know naval officers have not much influence."

But, he added, "the presidents are generally willing to give their appointments to a naval officer's son."

His father, he continued, "is a senior lieutenant, about 95 on the list for promotion. I have been with my father on shore and on shipboard a great deal and have always wanted to enter the Navy."

The original letter is preserved in the National Archives in Washington and only recently came to the attention of the Naval Academy Museum.

MAN ACCUSED OF 63 MURDERS ON TRIAL

By The Associated Press

PARIS, March 18 — Black-bearded Dr. Marcel Petiot, charged with murdering perhaps as many as 63 persons, goes on trial in a Paris court today.

The 55-year-old beetle-browed little physician is charged with luring his alleged victims to his home, a large house behind a 20-foot wall, with promises of helping them to escape from Nazi-occupied France in return for a fee.

A miscellany of human remains, including partially burned limbs and bodies contorted in a lime pit, were found by police summoned two years ago to the home by neighbors, who complained of thick, malodorous smoke. The smoke was found to be coming from a white-hot furnace in which human remains were later discovered.

Thirty-nine valises containing 97 petticoats, 57 pairs of socks, 57 Shirts and other clothes were found at another house.

Programs on the Air

Commercial-minded radio sponsors, whose most exciting reading matter are radio ratings, had an eye opener recently when the A. C. Neilson company, which samples shows by means of a device clamped right into the radio set, doped out a new way of appraising programs.

On the basis of time and talent, the Neilson people figure that "Dr. Christian" is the most economical radio show program on the air. They estimate that the show reaches 633 homes for each dollar spent.

"Fibber McGee and Molly" is second in line, reaching 569 homes for $1; and Walter Winchell is third with 557 homes for the same price.

The daytime bargains on the $1 basis are "Ma Perkins," reaching an estimated 1,185 homes; "Life Can Be Beautiful," 1,084 homes; "Pepper Young's Family," 1,074 homes, "When A Girl Marries," 1,028 homes; and "Tom Breneman's Breakfast in Hollywood," 1,022 homes.

Plant Victory Gardens, Head of AAA Urges

In a letter to township AAA community committeemen, Frank G. Montgomery, county AAA chairman today urged Marion county residents to plant victory gardens again this year to relieve the world's critical food shortage.

"Droughts in Europe have made the food situation more acute," the county AAA chairman said, and he added, "President Truman has asked us to share a little more of our food than we have been sharing. To do so means victory gardens are still in style this year and wartime efforts on the farm front."

STATE VETS' BUREAU URGED BY PLANNERS

The proposal approved by the Veterans Program commission for creation of a state veterans bureau was presented by O. L. Teagarden of Oak Harbor, O.

He suggested the seven-man bureau be composed of one representative each from the American Legion, United Spanish-American War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans and a World War II veteran and two public members.

NEW YORK, March 18—Immigration authorities today called a hearing for late this afternoon to determine what should be done with "Frankie," 13-year-old Polish mascot of a unit of the 102nd division who arrived here Saturday as a stowaway on the Transport General Anderson.

Army authorities disclosed that three sergeants who had been put in the ship's brig for smuggling the boy aboard were released from detention and taken to camp Kilmer, N. J., for separation.

The Army also said that the men, S/Sgt. Sigmund Egner of Brooklyn, Sgt. Joseph Muniz Jr. of Alliance, O., and Sgt. Pasquale Calorio of Trenton, N. J., had asked permission to attend the hearing.

"Frankie," whose real name is Bronislaw Stalicia, was a prisoner for three years in Dachau, where he saw his mother burned to death. Previously his father, a major in the Polish airforce, had been killed at Buchenwald.

Truman Second Choice for Navy Job Studied

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 18—Capitol Hill waited today for President Truman's second choice of an under secretary of the Navy as a possible new tip on unification of the armed services.

The reasoning of the lawmakers is that if Mr. Truman selects a man who is strong for the proposed merger, it will be a signal for the Navy to drop its continuing opposition to the single service plan.

Behind this is the fact that almost everyone on Capitol Hill expects the new appointee to step into the shoes of Secretary Forrestal, a mainspring in the navy-supported fight to keep the merger from materializing.

POPULAR VOTE ON BRITISH LOAN ASKED

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 18—A Republican listed among 52 Senators still undecided on the issue suggested today that the voters ought to pass on the proposed $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain.

Senator Hawkes (R-NJ) told a reporter that if there were any way of getting the question directly before the people, he would favor that procedure as a guide to congress. He conceded, however, that this could not be done short of a time-consuming constitutional amendment.

Hawkes and 51 colleagues who said they are undecided hold the fate of the loan proposal, on which the senate banking committee resumes hearings tomorrow.

An Associated Press poll showed 23 senators, including 15 Democrats and 8 Republicans, presently inclined to support the credit advance. Twenty senators, including 10 Republicans, nine Democrats and a Progressive, were listed as inclined against the loan at this time. Some of these said they might change their minds later.

Thirty Democrats and 22 Republicans said they still are on the fence. Three senators were not reached.

JOB'S DAUGHTERS HOLD GOLD-DIGGERS DANCE

80 Couples Attend Social Event at Masonic Temple.

A social highlight of Marion Bethel No. 2, Job's Daughters, was the gold-diggers dance held Saturday night in the Masonic Temple with 80 couples attending. The hall was decorated in blue, white and yellow crepe paper and on the black back drop was the title name of the dance in gold and silver letters. Dancing was from 9 to 12.

Each of the girls, escorting the boys to the dance, presented him with an unusual corsage. They were made of various articles such as vegetables of all kinds, and corn, popped and unpopped. One was made of a large breakfast roll tied with ribbon, another of a potted plant, and others made of eggs and various vegetables.

A prize was awarded for the cleverest corsage. It consisted of two large chicken feet with the toenails painted red and tied with ribbon. It was worn by Paul Arndt and designed by Phyllis Yazel. Miss Yazel was presented with a corsage of flowers.

During the intermission, Joan Evans gave two readings, and Joan Glassmeyer presented two piano selections. Judges in the corsage contest were Arthur Ward, G. B. Hewetson and Charles Buente. Miss Ruth Vail, queen of the Job's Daughters, and other officers were in charge of arrangements for the event.

Red Cross Helps Home Folk Keep in Touch with Servicemen

One of the many services performed by the Marion County Chapter of the American Red Cross is that of contacting families of service men and procuring information regarding the men in service. Hours and days of worry and anguish are eliminated and time saved by early contact with the Red Cross, records of the chapter show. The home service is only one of the departments set up by the Red Cross to aid the veteran and his family. The service is supported through the volunteer contributions made in the annual Red Cross drive now in progress. Marion county's quota of the National Red Cross Campaign Fund is $38,300.

Incident Cited

Records at the local office tell the following story:

A young wife contacted the office of the Marion County Chapter recently, greatly disturbed. She had received a telegram from a Army General hospital stating her husband was hospitalized there and was on the critical list. The wife asked what the chapter could do to obtain information for her. The chapter wired the Red Cross Field Director at the hospital and received a reply that the soldier was critically ill and recommended that the wife visit him. The Red Cross at the hospital made room reservations. Since the wife was so emotionally disturbed the local chapter assisted her in obtaining train reservation to the camp and advised the Red Cross at the time of her arrival.

After the wife returned to her home in Marion, the local chapter kept in contact with the Red Cross hospital worker and advised the wife of the soldier's condition.

Later the wife contacted the chapter stating the soldier was not receiving her mail. A telegram was sent to the Red Cross at the hospital asking that the soldier be advised that the wife is writing regularly.

The Red Cross assisted the wife in making two or three trips to visit her husband while he was recovering. After the soldier was discharged from the army hospital, he and his wife contacted the local chapter. The soldier explained that he was concerned about his health condition. He asked that the chapter interpret his illness to the military. The chapter wrote the Red Cross at the army hospital, advising the Red Cross worker about the soldier's request.

The Chapter later received a letter from the Red Cross that he had received a medical discharge, and that the Red Cross had assisted him in filing a claim for pension.

The ex-serviceman was invited to contact his local chapter regarding his claim for pension or any benefits available to veterans.

PROGRESSIVES JOIN G.O.P. IN WISCONSIN

By The Associated Press

PORTAGE, Wis., March 18—The Progressive party of Wisconsin, a liberal organization founded 12 years ago, has decided to abandon its party identity and seek to carry out its policies in Republican ranks.

A decision to abandon the Progressive organization and rejoin the Republicans, from which the Wisconsin group was organized in 1934, came at a state-wide conference of party members here Sunday after Sen. Robert M. La Follette, one of the Progressive party's founders and its titular head, recommended the action.

The vote to return to the G.O.P. came after a stormy six-hour conference.

On the showndown vote, 284 delegates favored rejoining the Republicans, 67 voted to retain Progressive party identity and 51 wanted to join the Democratic party.

Forty-two delegates took the floor to discuss the question before Sen. LaFollette was called upon.

LaFollette told the delegates he was convinced "the Republican party of Wisconsin offers us the best opportunity for the advancement of Progressive principles."

Declaring "only once in 30 years have the Democrats succeeded to power in the state," he said "the Democratic party has able, liberal men but the party now is stalled on dead center."

Since 1928, when a Democratic-Republican coalition was formed to break the Progressive hold, the party has been slipping. In 1938 Philip F. LaFollette, the senator's brother, was defeated in his campaign for reelection as governor. Since then the Republicans have won more and more offices.

The LaFollettes are sons of the late Robert Marion LaFollette Sr., "Old Bob," who in 1922 led the formation of a conference for Progressive political action, a federation of various progressive groups. "Old Bob" polled almost 5,000,000 votes as the federation's candidate for President in 1924.

Iran Rejects Oil Deal Under Pressure

By The Associated Press

LONDON, March 18—Iranian embassy officials in London said today that Iran was prepared to negotiate oil concessions with Russia only on condition that Soviet troops leave the country.

An embassy spokesman said he could neither confirm nor deny reports that Premier Ahmed Qavam Es Saltaneh is at present negotiating with the Russians in Tehran. He said it was "highly improbable" in view of an Iranian law prohibiting oil talks until foreign troops were evacuated.

"We do not believe that the premier would dare to breach this law," he added.

The spokesman added, however, that since parliament has been dissolved, Qavam is the virtual ruler of the country, but declared the premier would have to answer to the new parliament when it is elected.

Embassy officials said there were no Iranian objections to Russia having oil concessions in northern Iran.

Both the British and Americans are understood to hold the view that they should be given an opportunity to negotiate oil concessions on an equal basis with Russia or any other power.

130-Year-Old Rule Protects Capitol's Camera-Shy Solons

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 18—Today, as every day, from 100 to 300 cameras will be taken from people who have come to gander at the nation's capitol.

Why?

Well, the truth is that many a congressman loves to have his picture taken—but only when he's looking pretty.

Or as David Lynn, architect and general manager for the capitol, put it:

"Several congressmen object to having their pictures taken when they don't know about it."

The present rule for visitors, no picture anywhere on the capitol grounds or in any of the building, unless your congressman says it's okay.

Oddly, many congressmen don't know the rule exists Lynn says, that's because it has been on the books for 30 years, and some of the newer members still haven't heard of it.

Another rule is, no pictures without permission. And permission usually isn't granted unless there's a full house.

Rep. Forest A. Harness (R-Ind) thinks it's a good rule.

"When a picture shows only a few there" he told a reporter, "a constituent is apt to think we're all out playing golf.

"Actually we have so much to do we can't afford to waste time listening to arguments with which we're already familiar or to someone who's talking to get his name in the congressional record.

"Some awfully dull stuff goes on on the floor of the house."

Touche, congressman!

Seven Pacific Vets Bury Dog Comrade With Full Honors

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA, March 18—Blackie, little five-year-old Labrador retriever, probably never dreamed it would happen to him, but seven World War II veterans—his pals during 32 months of Pacific fighting—paid him final homage yesterday, a burial with full military honors.

An unofficial "technical sergeant" attached to the 282nd Const Artillery of the 10th American Army, Blackie was buried in the Cheltenham pet cemetery. A Legion drum and bugle corps played "taps" as his master James Dadario of Philadelphia, placed a tiny stone on his grave.

Blackie's Army file shows he was AWOL only once. It also says he left 10 heirs in the Pacific.

New Non-Explosive Anaesthetics Permit Use of Electric Knife in Chest Surgery

By RENNIE TAYLOR
Associated Press Science Reporter

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18— A combination of anaesthetics which for the first time permits surgeons to use the electric knife in chest operations was announced today by Dr Phyllis Harroun and Dr F E Beckert of the University of California Medical school.

The combination consists of nitrous oxide of laughing gas common only used in tooth extractions, and curare, a powerful poison originally utilized by South American Indians to make their arrows more deadly

Reporting in Anaesthesia, a medical journal, Dr Harroun and Dr Beckert explained that the laughing gas puts the patient to sleep and the curare paralyzes the breathing muscles, which must be immobilized during chest surgery

Even more important, neither curare nor nitrous oxide are explosive That eliminates the danger that the tiny sparks from the electric knife will cause an explosion in the lungs of the patient.

Ordinary surgical anaesthetics such as ether and cyclopropane are potent enough to put the patient to sleep and paralyze chest muscles, but they are highly explosive There have been instances in which accidental sparks in operating rooms have caused explosions with fatal results.

The electric knife, as distinguished from the surgeon's scalpel, is advantageous in chest operations because the stream of little sparks not only cuts through the flesh but also cauterizes the wound and seals off many of the smaller veins and arteries which it severs. This helps to prevent excessive bleeding

There are several other non-explosive anaesthetics but they are generally held to be unsuitable for chest surgery, especially where an operation is prolonged, Dr Harroun and Dr Beckert said

In most operations the chest muscles are permitted to continue functioning so that the patient receives enough air naturally to sustain respiration. When the chest muscles are immobilized a breathing bag attached to the mouth performs this job.

Dr Harroun and Dr Beckert said the curare-nitrous oxide combination had been used in 68 operations with good results

BOWLES - ANDERSON BLOW-UP SEEN NEAR

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 18—A move by Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles to check rising cotton clothing prices may bring to the explosive point friction between Bowles and Secretary of Agriculture Anderson.

Anderson appeared today to be on a hot spot as the result of Bowles order instructing OPA to require larger down payments for cotton to be delivered later

The order is designed to curb cotton speculation which Bowles contends has driven up prices for raw cotton and for cotton clothing

Anderson s dilemma arises out of these circumstances

Cotton state congress members are opposed to the Bowles order

In addition, a committee of southern senators told Anderson over the week-end that under terms of the price control act no OPA regulation affecting a farm commodity can be put into effect without approval of the secretary of agriculture

One senator who withheld use of his name said Anderson had not signed the order and that he gave us the definite impression he did not intend to"

If he does refuse to sign the order, Anderson is ignoring President Truman s wage-price policy he announced last month

Bowles and Anderson have not seen-eye-to-eye on a number of price policy matters Bowles has spoken out against food price increases—although he has permitted some since he became stabilization chief—and Anderson has advocated them Bowles also is known to feel that Anderson has not come out strongly enough for continuation of food subsidies
